The president has signified his willingness to see any member of cabinet who desires to call and some of them will probably see him this afternoon for the first time since he was shot.

THE DAY. LONG BRANCH, September 9. - With wind and weather in his favor the president has passed another good day, and, according to all accounts. the improvement of yesterday has been kept up, or, as the bulletins say, the case has made favorable progress. Attorney-General McVeagh argues as "Until the septicemic confollows: dition of the president's blood is further eliminated it will be impossible to say that danger is past." Says he: We know that the heart is all right, and we know the wound has begun to show more improvement. LITTLE ROCK, September 9.-A Pat McGowen, Geo. W. Podgett and Wm. T. Brown, white, and Amos and Abel Manley, Indians, were all hanged there to day on the same scaffold. The men showed bravado to the last. The execution was private but thousands of people were in town. The doomed men all slept well last night except McGowen, who was very restless. He sang and prayed before going to bed but ate with a relish this morning.

They all seemed resigned to their fate and confessed their guilt, but said their lives were threatened. The Creek Indians professed innocence. The three whites said they expected to go to another world. Brown fainted when taken into the sun, but soon recovered and all showed wonderful bravery on the scaffold. At 11:30 a. m. the drop fell.
